LET IT ALONE.

The Boston Herald, a mugwump paper, makes the statement that President Harrison will recommend, in his forthcoming message to Congress, the repeal of the internal tax on tobacco. Just how the Herald came to possess itself of so much knowledge of President Harrison's affairs, it does not say. In response to this positive statement of a paper not in sympathy with the administration, another journal wisely asks: "Why should the president advocate a repeal of the tobacco tax, which is one of the most justifiable and least burdensome taxes on luxuries made by the government, and which yields a revenue needed to pay pensions? A repeal of the tobacco tax would benefit tobaccoists and middlemen rather than the planters and users of tobacco. Instead of giving the tobacco dealers the sum now paid into the treasury, why not keep this source of revenue open and use the proceeds in the payment of pensions?"

The republican administration would certainly make a blunder to recommend the repeal of the tax on tobacco. Why repeat it? On what substantial ground can any one build an argument for the abolition of the tobacco tax? What good would it do the people were the tax removed? If there is an article in existence that should be taxed under our internal revenue system, that article is tobacco. In no case is it an article of necessity notwithstanding the New York Tribune and the opinion of Mr. Blaine.

But aside from the justice of the tobacco tax, the country cannot afford to dispense with it. The expenditures of the government are on the increase, as a matter of course. Pension bills are multiplying by the millions every year. The navy, the civil service, and the army are drawing more largely upon the treasury than ever before. This increase is forced by the rapid growth of all departments of the government. Another thing, the government cannot afford to lose the tobacco tax, if any important reduction is made in duty on sugar, and it seems to be a matter of simple justice, that as between sugar and tobacco, the former should go untaxed. The claim that tobacco by its widespread use has become an article of necessity, and therefore should go untaxed, is not well supported by argument. The policy should be, put as many articles on the free list as possible, articles not manufactured in this country, but let it remain on all others, and likewise the internal revenue tax on all articles of luxury. It is a better policy and greater justice to tax tobacco, but give the people free sugar.

THE DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY

Mr. Blaine is reported as saying that it would be the wisest stroke of policy for the republicans in both houses to unite, as soon as congress convenes, upon a bill designed to meet the popular demand for tariff revision without disturbing the welfare of any established American industry. This is precisely what ought to be done. It will not be an easy task to frame a tariff bill that will satisfy all interests, but the country will look to the fifty-first congress for good and prompt work in this connection. —Washington Post.

Mr. Blaine has been in favor of tariff revision for several years. So was the lamented Arthur, so also, General Garfield. But where will the work begin? The statesman who shall frame a tariff bill so that it shall not disturb any of the industries of the country, and at the same time will inaugurate practical reform, will be wiser than another statesman of this generation.

It is doubtful if any bill of the kind suggested by the Washington Post could pass either house of congress. In the first place, the republican party in congress are not agreed on such a revision. There are some high tariff men in congress. They believe in keeping the duty on sugar as unjust as that imposed duty is. The south would vote almost solidly for the sugar tariff. The Pennsylvania members would vote always for duty on iron, and Ohio and other wool states would never consent to lower the duty on wool, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota want the duty to remain on lumber, and there are scores of articles, products of the south, that the southern members want protected. In the second place, the democrats in congress will not vote for a republican scheme to reform the tariff. They would disfigure the bill by amendments to that degree which would destroy the usefulness of the measure. They are not in favor of honestly and wisely reforming the tariff, the old Morrill bill and the Mill's bill of '88, prove that the democrats' idea of tariff reform is one-sided, sectional, unjust and discriminating. In one of Senator Morrill's speeches on the tariff, delivered years ago, he showed the difficulty of revising the tariff to any considerable extent. Lumbermen want the duty on sugar put off on wool and iron. Pennsylvania wants the duty taken from sugar and wool, but demands a duty on iron and coal. Ohio would like to have free sugar but a heavy tariff on wool and woolsens. And so it goes, until one begins to consider with sobriety the remark made by General Hancock in 1880, by which then made the country laugh,—"the tariff is a local issue."

There is no doubt the tariff should be revised, but revised wisely, so that the protective feature shall not be destroyed. There are scores of articles on which tariff remains which should be admitted free, or nearly so. And, of course, there should be little or no duty on such a list of prime necessities as sugar. But congress does not seem to think so, and on this point the democratic and republican members are nearly agreed. It would be a wise stroke of policy indeed, for the republicans, if a popular and just tariff revision bill could come from their hands. Will Mr. Blaine suggest one?

THE MONTANA ELECTION.

Helena (Mont.) Journal: "On the face of the returns" the Democratic managers of Montana are a queer lot. They moved heaven and earth and corporations and railroad gangs to vote everything that would breeches for "the Democratic ticket"—non-resident, non-citizen, non-English speaking nonpersons preferred—and crowd over such things as generalship. But when in the course of Providence and events their generalship failed, through a misunderstanding of orders by subordinates, and a rotten borough returning board getting outside the law, and their scheme was throttled and forced into the courts, where they are liable to the exposure that will paralyze them, up go their hands in horror of a republican board of canvassers that would halt their game. The democratic party has been caught with stolen goods in its possession and simulates a virtuous indignation that it genuine would assert itself against the perpetrators of the crime, rather than against the officers who seized the goods in transit and are compelling the possessors to tell how they came into possession. The republicans demand that the matter shall be investigated in the courts. The democratic managers demand that there shall be no investigation. These are facts: How do they present themselves to unprejudiced observers? No honest man is afraid of justice. It is the guilty who fear and evade it.

SNOW-STORMS IN THE EAST.

Reports of a Light Fall in Virginia and Other States.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 24.—The first snow of the season commenced falling here yesterday morning and continued all forenoon. It melted, however, as fast as it fell. Reports from other places show the storm to have been quite general.

At Winchester, Va., it snowed most of the day with the thermometer near the freezing point.

At Harrisonburg, Va., a terrific storm of rain, snow, hail, and sleet prevailed for twenty-four hours. At times the wind blew a perfect hurricane.

At Staunton, Va., the weather was extremely inclement all day, alternately raining, hailing, and snowing.

At Cumberland, Md., there is a general fall of snow in that section, it being the first of the season. The mountains are covered with a coating of white, while a heavy northeast wind prevails.

A New York dispatch reports quite a lively snow storm in progress at Sandy Hook, the first of the season.

Had to Quit Town for Marrying.

SPENCER, Ind., Oct. 24.—George W. Shirley, the proprietor of the Merchants' hotel, who was burned in effigy Monday night for bringing a second wife home with him only two weeks after burying his first one, has had to leave to-day. The indignation increased to such an extent that he sold out his hotel to his nephew and left on the train for parts unknown.

Gov. Foraker's Condition.

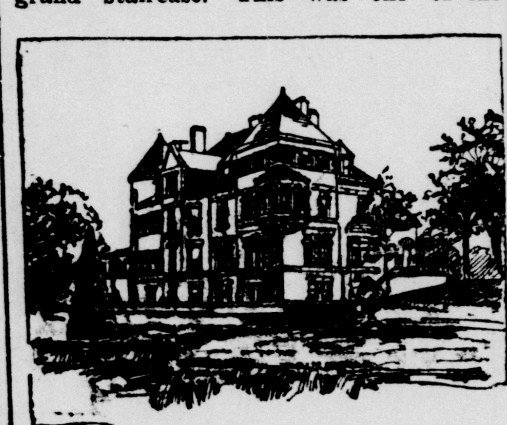

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 24.—Gov. Foraker has gradually improved to-day and condition now is favorable to rapid recovery.

THE STUDEBAKER MANSION.

Description of the Palatial Home Ravaged by Fire.

The palatial home of Hon. Cien Studebaker, at South Bend, Ind., was gutted by fire recently, the loss being over $125,000. The house was one of the finest in Indiana. The material was native cobble stone, irregular in form and varied in color. It had many broad porches paved with tile and supported by marble pillars. The main entrance was at the north-west corner. A flight of steps led into a mahogany paneled vestibule paved with mosaic.

The walls and ceiling of the main hall were paneled with solid oak and the polished floor was covered with thick Turkish rugs. An elegant oak table occupied the center of the hall and beyond it was the grand staircase. This was one of the most beautiful features of the house. There were three flights of broad, carpeted stairs, the landings covered with rugs, and on the second floor was a high balustrade of oak intricately carved. All the carvings in the hall were exceedingly fine. The drawing-room was finished in colonial style, and the woodwork and furnishings were of pure white and gold. The library floor, walls, and ceiling were of mahogany, with bookcases of the same material. Mahogany was also used extensively in the dining-room, which was so large that 100 persons could dine in it at the same time. Back of this was a spacious breakfast room, with a butler's pantry separating it from the servant's hall beyond. The chambers were en suite, with dressing and bath rooms adjoining. On the top floor was a fine art gallery, called and paneled in oak.

Mad Dog.

Because the dog has a high temperature naturally, and an excited, nervous system, he is easily tormented into a spasm of fear and frenzy. And especially is this the case, should he become lost, or strayed away from his master. So in the hot season, and at such times, the idle boy or man sees symptoms of hydrophobia in the lost and worried dog, and chases, stones, or shoots at him, till the conclusion that he is mad furnishes the thoughtless, ignorant and cruel sufficient warrant to persecute the poor, frightened brute even to death. A hundred to one, he is less mad than his pursuers.

THE CASE REALLY OPENED.

OPENING ADDRESS IN THE CRONIN TRIAL.

What the State Expects to Prove—Outlining the Murderous Conspiracy from its Inception.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—The Cronin case has attracted fresh interest now that a jury has been secured and the introduction of evidence is about to begin. This morning at 10 o'clock Judge Longenecker began the opening speech for the State. Following is an outline of his remarks: Judge Longenecker told how, on the morning of the 4th of May Daniel Coughlin went to Pat Dinan, the liveryman, and asked him to reserve a horse and buggy that evening for a friend of his who would call for it, and how he (Coughlin) would go security for the use of the rig: how at 7:30 p. m. the "friend" of Dan Coughlin called for the rig, which was prepared for him, the circumstances under which the man drove away, and how this "friend" of Dan Coughlin protested when a white horse was hitched to the buggy. Judge Longenecker then told how the horse and buggy reached Dr. Cronin's residence, 416 North Clark street; how the man called for Dr. Cronin, and on presentation of one O'Sullivan's cards, and the remark that one of O'Sullivan's men had been hurt, the doctor immediately followed him, entered the buggy, and was driven to the Ashland avenue cottage. The unfortunate doctor was traced to the cottage where he disappeared. The finding of the blood-stained trunk on the Evans-ton road, the subsequent finding of Dr. Cronin's body in the man-hole, and the identification of his remains followed.

Then came the presentation of the conspiracy against Dr. Cronin and its inception in Camp 20. The first witnesses to be called, continued the State's Attorney, will be the members of Camp 20, who will testify to the appointment by Eugene J. Connelley, secretary of the camp, of a secret committee to try Dr. Cronin for treason. The State will show that such a committee was appointed, its membership will be named, and a general outline of its work will be presented, covering the period from February to May 4, the date of the doctor's disappearance. The work of the committee in the interim between the dates will likewise be shown. The State will show how, acting upon instructions from the trial committee, the Clark street flat was rented March 23 by J. R. Simonds, who is now generally supposed to have been none other than Patrick Conroy; how the furniture for the flat was bought at Revell's by the same J. R. Simonds, and taken to the Clark street flat to be subsequently removed to the Carlson cottage. The subsequent hiring of the Carlson cottage by Burke and Conroy, the removal of the furniture to that place from 117 Clark street, and other minor events will follow chronologically. Then the famous contract entered into by P. O'Sullivan, the ice-man, with Dr. Cronin less than three weeks before the latter's "removal," and after all the arrangements for the removal had been practically completed, will be shown. The entire conspiracy against the doctor will be made complete.

The Toronto Times, William Dwyer's and Miss Murphy's story, and the tin box of Burke are side issues that were lightly touched upon by the State's Attorney in conclusion.

The evidence showing Dr. Cronin's entrance into the Carlson cottage on the night of the murder will, it is said, be conclusive. Judge Longenecker expects to prove by good witnesses the following facts:

On the night of May 4 two men had occasion to go to Lake View to arrange some deal in real estate in which they were interested. One of them is an Irish-American and a member of the Clan-na-Gael organization. The other is a reputable American citizen. They were detained until a late hour and stopped at the house of a friend to supper. They did not get through until after 9 o'clock, and on their way home they had to walk by the Carlson cottage. As they passed the scene of the murder they saw a buggy drive up. In it were seated two men, and as they passed by one of the pedestrians said to the other as the buggy drove past, "See that man on the far side of the buggy; that is Dr. Cronin, the Irish nationalist." As he spoke the words the buggy pulled up. It stopped in front of the Carlson cottage. Cronin sprang out and rushed up the steps as he had been summoned on a case of great emergency. The man who drove the buggy stepped out and walked up a couple of steps. The Clan-na-Gael pedestrian was on the point of halting Dr. Cronin and speaking to him, but as the latter appeared to be in such a hurry he refrained. The door was opened and Dr. Cronin stepped inside. The man who drove him there did not go inside. He turned round from the foot of the steps, jumped into the buggy, and drove away as fast as the horse could take him. It will take at least four weeks to examine all the witnesses.

GOULD'S GREAT RIVAL.

The Union Pacific and Northwestern Railways Practically United.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A new and important movement in the railroad world just made is an alliance between two of the most extensive railway systems of this country—the Chicago & Northwestern and the Union Pacific. It is stated positively that these roads will henceforth be opened in complete harmony, and with the view of each giving to the other all the traffic its agents can secure for points on either line.

The agreement was first ratified by the board of directors of the Union Pacific company with the government directors present, and then by the board of directors of the Chicago & Northwestern. The far-reaching effects of the alliance may be inferred from the fact that the Chicago & Northwestern operates about 4,300 miles of road and that the total length of all lines of the Union Pacific is about 6,300 miles. The agreement will result in other arrangements which enable it to reach Portland, Ore. The main line extends from Council Bluffs to Ogden, Utah. It has extensive branches to Denver, Leadville and Kansas City.

The recent settlement of the long-existing differences between the Union and Northern Pacific interests places the Union Pacific in a more advantageous position than ever before and adds to the importance of the new scheme entered into with the Chicago & Northwestern. There is, however, a far deeper significance in all this than appears on the surface. The Chicago & Northwestern is under the control of the Vanderbilts and its board of directors includes several gentlemen closely allied with their interests. The Vanderbilts have for several years been solidifying their lines east of Chicago, and have expended vast sums of money in improvements.

Now, with their close affiliations with the Union Pacific, the Vanderbilts will, probably, branch out toward the Pacific coast. This could very readily be done by continuing the line of the Union Pacific from Frisco, Utah, southward to one of the southern California seaports in proximity to Los Angeles. With the enormous financial backing which the scheme would have there can be little doubt as to the speedy completion of the line when once work is undertaken.

What gives color to the rumored intention of the Vanderbilts is the steady absorption of Union Pacific shares for some time, supposed to be on their account. As already stated, that part of the program which brings the Union Pacific and Chicago & Northwestern into closer harmony is already settled. Those who ought to know declare that it will not be long before a Vanderbilt through line, extending from ocean to ocean, will be an accomplished fact.

It is stated that the consolidation scheme was entered into by the Vanderbilts to protect their interests and form a transcontinental rival to the Huntington-Gould combination. The Northwestern joined in the agreement because its rival, the Milwaukee & St. Paul road, was in the other scheme. It is a fight between Vanderbilt and Gould, with millions of dollars and thousands of miles of railroad behind each of the contestants.

BOSTON, Oct. 24.—President Charles Francis Adams could not be seen to-day concerning the traffic arrangement of his road, the Union Pacific, with the Chicago & Northwestern. From other sources it was learned that the arrangement had been made, and henceforth through trains will be run over both roads from Chicago to the western termini of the Union Pacific. The arrangement is the result of Mr. Adams' trip to the West, where he reorganized the road on a new working basis.

VICTORY FOR BROOKLYN.

The Bridgeports Once More Polish Up the New York Giants.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The fourth game for the world's championship was played at Washington Park, Brooklyn, before 9,045 persons. O'Brien was presented with a badge, in which are imbedded twenty-five handsome diamonds. Score: Brooklyn.....2 0 0 3 3—10 New York.....0 0 1 1 0 5—7

—The union slaughter house question now bids fair of taking final and definite shape. Joseph Loeb, August Krueger and Chas. Kneek are about to build a large and commodious slaughter house just outside the city limits in the town of Rock, located in the Barnes' stone quarry. These gentlemen propose building for their own special convenience, but will have plenty of room so as to accommodate all the butchers in the city who desire to accept of their terms.

—Beloit Citizen:—The improvements being made on the Presbyterian church bids fair to make it one of the most attractive churches in our beautiful city. The work is progressing very rapidly and is being well done. The ceilings have been beautifully frescoed, and with the memorial windows, carpets and seats in place, the interior will be very attractive. The steeple also improves the looks of the building and with the changes to be made the corner of Broad and Pleasant streets will be beautified. Our citizens who have contributed so generously to the funds for carrying out the proposed improvements will not regret their donations, for the changes wrought and the increasing attractiveness of that spot in our city will more than repay their generosity.

—A great bargain—Having a fine offer to go into the grocery trade I offer my stock and fixtures cheap. Books will show a good paying business with small amount of capital invested.

It was a two-year-old colt and very spirited, and it is thought that if the horse had broken loose, it would have torn the rig to pieces and probably injured itself. But everything was found in first class order, no damage having been done. If it was done as a joke, it was a serious one, and the parties, if caught, should be made to suffer for it.
